OUR FRIEND SPAIN

None of the nations in the coalition formed against the Central Powers has been able to accomplish as much with Spain as has the United States. We have made more favorable treaties and have drawn the Spanish people closer to the cause of the Allies than has England or France. The reason for this is largely economic, but that does not alter the fact.

Three years ago practically the only Spaniard who favored the cause of the Allies was King Alfonso. Today it is probable that a majority of them do. An agreement was recently made by which Spain will furnish our army in Europe with certain supplies in return for the food furnished the Spanish by this country. This is the first trade agreement that any nation has been able to make with Spain since the outbreak of the war.

We talk of the war's having united France and England or England and America, but the re-establishment of good-will between the United States and Spain must not be overlooked. It was only twenty years ago that these two nations met in battle. With all of its evil, war accomplishes much good. If two great countries can become reconciled in such a short time, it is not merely a dream to believe that America and Germany, twenty years hence, will again be in co-operation. The one requisite is to make the German people the German government.

THE JOYFUL TAXPAYER.

The tax collector sees many a smile and many a frown through his little brass-barred window. He of the frown fingers his tax money lovingly a while and finally reluctantly hands it over the marble counter. But he of the smile pays his without hesitation, because he has figured out the good it will do.

If the first man would realize where his money goes, he would not have to be urged to pay it, and he would forget to frown about it. He would know he was helping the helpless. His money supports the homeless, the deaf, the dumb, the blind, and the poor; it improves the jails so that those who must go there are not forced to continue in unfavorable surroundings.

His taxes provide more children with an education because more schoolhouses can be built, and more teachers paid. When he pays taxes, he is indirectly making for a nation of better citizens.

Civic improvement is another good accomplished by his taxes. They help lay sidewalks, pave and clean streets, put up traffic guides and sign posts.

When he realizes this, he is rather glad he has taxes to pay.

It seems that no one is satisfied in this world. The people who pay the income tax grumble because they have to pay it, and the people who do not have to pay it envy those who do.

Caruso pays $59,000 income tax. We wonder if he has "voiced" any objection.

THE OPEN COLUMN

Editor of the Missouriian: The second of the series of Sunday afternoon faculty musicals given in the auditorium at Christian College was attended by a large and appreciative audience.

Miss Anna Laura Johnson, mezzo contralto, Robert J. White, violinist, and Henry H. Loudenback, pianist, were the artists, and they united in giving a unique and varied program. The opening aria "O don fatale" from Verdi's "Don Carlo" was admirably rendered by Miss Johnson and revealed a sympathetic mezzo contralto voice of excellent quality. The other numbers chosen by Miss Johnson proved her versatility. They consisted of Chansonettes, 18th Century Lyrics, Folk Songs, Plantation Songs, a Sacred Song with violin obligata and the highly dramatic "Cry of Rachel" set to music by Mary Turner Salter. The last named was especially well rendered and in response to an insistent demand for an encore Miss Johnson gave a humorous little song by J. T. Clark.

Robert J. White again, with his sympathetic tone, ease and sincerity evoked much enthusiasm. Wienlawski numbers are always appreciated and they were given a musically rendering, while the Slavonic Dance in G minor by Dvorak-Kreisler and Schon Rosmarin by Kreisler, were played with a charming sprightliness and evenness of tone, and showed a complete mastery of double stopping harmonies, and all such technical difficulties. As an encore Mr. White gave a rapid Scherzo by Daniel van Goes.

The pianoforte solos by Director Henry H. Loudenback were an interesting feature of the program. Autumn sketches by Wilson G. Smith were very melodious and the pianist's sympathetic touch in pianissimo passages was especially noticeable here. The brilliant Sixth Hungarian Rhapsody by Liszt with its characteristic twists and turns and bravura octave passages was rendered with force. As an encore Mr. Loudenback played Schubert's Marche Militaire.

If the cop says "Stop!" it may be too late to wish you had obeyed the law. Your headlights must not throw a single blinding ray of light above 42 inches from the ground. The fact that you thought your lights were O. K. is no excuse. It's up to you to be sure.

There is an abundance of convincing proof that the McKee Standard Lens meets every requirement of the law. The scientifically designed prisms give 63% more light than a plain window glass lens and project this light below the 42-inch dead-line, 600 feet ahead of the car.

The exclusive concave-convex shape gives a very strong side light that illuminates ditches, banks and beyond curves—and without which there is danger of a smash-up in turning corners and passing cars.

The McKee Standard Lens is all glass, crystal-clear—needs no dimmer—and makes an unusually neat appearance.
